If after examination such officer is of opinion that the packages have not been opened or tampered with in transit, if their number is complete, and if they be found to be not less or more than the full weight specified in the pass (allowance being made for dreggs or moisture) by exposure in air or damp under such rules as the Board may prescribe, the packages shall be made over to the licensee who produced the pass. Otherwise the packages shall be detained pending the action of the Collector who may charge, in respect of any excess or deficiency greater than is allowed, double the value payable under rule XVIII for opium supplied from a Government stockpile, and may also, on proof of negligence, withdraw the licensee's licence and otherwise deal with him as provided in the Opium Act, 1878.

Every consignment of the articles imported under this rule shall be transported under cover of the receipt granted on payment of the customs duty or under the special order of the Board of Revenue or the Resident or Political officer as the case may be.

The Standard Barometer and Thermometer are read at 8 a.m., 10 a.m., 4 p.m., and 8 p.m., and the daily means are obtained by the application of hourly corrections, deduced from twenty years' observations. The station of the Barometer is twenty-two feet above the level of the sea, and the receiver of the Rain Gauge is two feet from the ground. The wind, rain and general weather registered are for the current Civil Day—from midnight to midnight.

The total quantity of rain collected since January 1st is 46.22 inches, the average for the same period being 59.77 inches.

(H) Any person who contravenes the provisions of sub-section (F) may, on conviction by a Magistrate, be ordered to forfeit any such matches in his possession, and any matches so forfeited shall be destroyed or otherwise dealt with as the Magistrate may direct.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

The object of this Bill is to prohibit the exportation into, and the manufacture and sale in, British India of matches which contain white (yellow) phosphorus.

The provisions of the Bill follow, so far as is necessary and practicable, the text of the English White Phosphorus Matches Prohibition Act, 1901 (5 Edw. 7, ch. 42).

The Bill was introduced into the Council of the Governor-General for making Laws and Regulations on the 22nd September 1911. At the Council meeting of the 1st March 1912, however, a resolution was passed on this subject on the ground that the necessity for the proposed legislation had not been substantiated, and it was decided to postpone the consideration of the Bill for one year and to submit, in the meantime, additional information regarding (1) the accuracy as to the use of the statement that modern methods of manufacture of matches involve the use of white phosphorus, and (2) the availability of suitable brands of red phosphorus which are suitable for use in India, having in view the climatic conditions and the importance of not increasing the cost of matches to consumers of the lower classes. The Bill was accordingly withdrawn on the understanding that it would be re-introduced in the next session of 1912.

With reference to the first point the following facts have been ascertained regarding the continued occurrence of accidents in Sweden, Norway, Belgium and the United States of America, which have not joined the European International Convention and which profess to have adopted the latest and most improved methods of manufacture. In Sweden, between the years 1902 and 1910, as shown by the official reports of the Inspector of match factories in that country, there was 16 admitted cases of arsenic besides a number of doubtful ones. In 1905 there were no cases, and the "Inspector's" reports mentioned the collection of the disease. In 1906 there were no less than seven cases, and there were one case in each of the years 1908 to 1910. In Norway, the number of persons exposed to poison was fifteen in each year between 1905 and 1910. In their report for 1907-08, the Factory Inspector in that country stated that it might be assumed that the precautionary measures adopted, the introduction of new appliances of ventilation, and the observation of the special regulations had resulted in the complete elimination of the disease. Nevertheless, there was a case of arsenic in each of the years 1909 and 1910. In Belgium, where four factories use white phosphorus, there was a case of arsenic in 1909, and the Belgian Annual Report on Factory Inspection in 1909 mentions the fact that there were two cases of phosphorus poisoning in that year in spite of strict clearance of the exposed persons. In the United States of America, in a joint investigation recently undertaken by the American Bureau of Labor and the American Bureau of the International Association of Labour Legislation, 15 cases of phosphorus poisoning were discovered by Federal officials in an investigation covering 15 out of the 16 American match factories; and subsequent personal enquiries conducted by the President of the American Federation indicated that for four of these factories alone the number should have been increased to 30. In view of these and similar disclosures an Act was passed in the United States of America on the 21st April 1912 imposing a tax on white phosphorus matches and prohibiting their import and export. The latter clause shows that the latest information available does not substantiate the assertion that improved methods of manufacture are sufficient to stamp out arsenic.

The Vienna Medical Society in 1908, also, in presenting a detailed enquiry that about 75 deaths from phosphorus poisoning occurred annually in Austria, declared that the best regulations had in effect in that country. The experience of the United Kingdom was similar, the Chief Inspector of Factories in England estimating in June 1909 that the absence of arsenic cases of arsenic in itself manufacturers, the cases which occurred in Great Britain being (and was) connected with a fire.

That a similar view is held in almost all civilized countries is indicated by the list of countries which have joined the Convention as to be, without joining it, effectively controlled the manufacture of matches. The European countries adhering to the Convention are France, Germany, Belgium, Denmark, Norway, Sweden, Italy, Finland, Spain and the United Kingdom. In America an Act prohibiting the use and manufacture of white phosphorus matches was passed in July 1909, and in Japan a similar law is proposed in white phosphorus matches, and in the latter country, as is clearly stated their import and export is prohibited. In Greece, Portugal, Roumania, Bulgaria, Serbia and Venezuela the use of matches is a double monopoly and a double sales control, and in Sweden the importation and consumption of white phosphorus matches is prohibited through their manufacture for export is allowed. The Government has also been joined by almost all the French, Dutch and Belgian Colonies, including the Union of South Africa and New Zealand. America also has prohibited the importation of white phosphorus matches since December 1906, and Tasmania has prohibited both their sale and manufacture.

With regard to the second question, it has been ascertained that a large proportion of the brands of strike anywhere matches in use in the United Kingdom do not contain white phosphorus. The results of the official tests made in England by the Board of Customs and Excise for the purpose of distinguishing white phosphorus matches, up to December 1911, showed that, out of 271 brands of strike anywhere matches tested, only eleven were found to contain white phosphorus. Figures have been obtained from the Indian Customs House of the imports of matches during the year 1911-12. The proportion of strike anywhere matches imported was not in England, 15 per cent, at Calcutta, 51 2 per cent, at Rangoon, 85 per cent at Bombay, and 12 6 per cent at Madras. All these, with the exception of half a dozen brands from Austria, were found by chemical test to contain white phosphorus. The fact that the use of white phosphorus matches is smaller in Bengal than in other parts of India, and has for years been non-existent in Burma without causing any practical inconvenience, goes to demonstrate the fact that the white phosphorus matches the only one which is suitable for a cheap domestic article as far as the consumer is concerned, Bengal and Burma being two of the provinces with the heaviest rainfall. An additional argument to the effect is provided by the fact of tropical countries which, as already stated, have joined the same Committee for instance—British East Africa, Mozambique, the Seychelles, Southern and Northern Nigeria, Uganda, Fiji, Camille, the Gold Coast, Sierra Leone, Bermuda, Newfoundland, Madagascar, etc. Moreover, as a result of experiments made in England on behalf of the House of Commons, it has been distinctly stated that there is no evidence that a match containing white phosphorus is of less safety, in regard to spontaneous ignition, in any way superior to a phosphorus sesquioxide match not containing white phosphorus. Figures have been obtained of the prices in different parts of India, during 1911-12, of cheap safety matches, and strike anywhere matches with and without white phosphorus. It has been ascertained that there is practically no difference in price between the cheap safety match and the harder match (whether containing white phosphorus or not).
